Flying Saucers, Secret Agents, Flying Lessons By Dave Wilde Matt Helm is an agent for a super-secret agency that operates in the shadows and does the tough work no one wants to admit needs doing. Not only does he have a license to kill, but he knows intimately that feelings and emotions have no place in this business and if you are too cautious and too moralistic that agent you only wounded might come back up firing at you. This one involves UFOs and strange ray guns and other mysterious sightings. It involves another espionage agency out to do Helm wrong. It involves his early nemesis the gorgeous Nayda. It takes the reader deep into Mexico and into the Sea of Cortez. Gritty, fast paced, unsentimental, and simply a damn good read. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. SIMPLY THE BEST By David M. Eavey I've read the James Bond novels but they cannot compare to Matt Helm. There isn't any spy or government agent tougher than he is. Donald Hamilton created the perfect protagonist. His stories are perfect for adventure junkies like myself. I will be waiting anxiously for the next book in the series. 3 of 3 people found the following review helpful. I like these books By Mongol321 I have been a fan of the Matt Helm novels since I first encountered them in the early 1960's. Donald Hamilton is not a great writer, but he is a creator of good plots and believably ambivalent characters. The violence in the books is not dwelt on in detail, but is treated in a matter-of-fact, this-is-the-way-the-world-is manner that may seem too cold blooded for some readers.

Matt Helm is puzzled. He's been sent to Mexico to investigate the sighting of a flying saucer, but Helm doesn't believe in little green men. Then his Russian opposite number is shot in her hotel, but who did it? And why are the Mexican cops acting so tough? Time to track down the redhead who called in the sighting and get to the bottom of the case.
